What's New In?

DexposE2 is a new task switcher for Windows, created with a similar purpose to Mac OS X's Expose feature. Keeps track of running apps and lets you switch from one to another by just moving the mouse cursor in the corners of the screen. You can also configure hotkeys to control everything and DexposE2 is compatible with most of the common PC programs. Keeping track of the active windows seems to be a very useful feature, but there's no pre-visualization on the thumbnails, which is a weak point in the application. DexposE2 is still in beta, so it might not be perfect, but it definitely worths a try. I wrote a small C++ program to test it. It worked fine, not only with C:\Windows\System32\cmd.exe, but also with C:\Users\[my_user_name]\AppData\Local\temp\_rm_temp_[some_random_stuff]\cmd.exe. However, I can't make it work well in some other C:\Windows\System32\...\cmd.exe programs, such as C:\Windows\System32\file.exe, which doesn't work fine either (the cursor is never moved away from the screen border), but they work OK with C:\Users\[my_user_name]\AppData\Local\temp\_rm_temp_[some_random_stuff]\cmd.exe. In these cases, the program simply closes, suggesting that it is an issue with the application itself, because the other C:\Windows\System32\...\cmd.exe programs are perfectly working fine. I then tested it on Windows 7, and it worked fine. I guess this is a bug on that C:\Users\[my_user_name]\AppData\Local\temp\_rm_temp_[some_random_stuff]\cmd.exe application, which doesn't depend on C:\Windows\System32\.... I also ran it with AutoHotkey (working fine), which might explain why it is working properly on Windows 7. I'm running Windows 7 x64.Q: How do you add a Django Project to an existing Python Project I am trying to add a Django Project to my existing Python
