Create high-performance macros with time-saving shortcuts. You may have heard of the “Windows hotkeys for Linux” (HKL), which allow you to launch Windows-based applications via hotkey. Keymacro can turn all your Linux machines into a virtual Windows box. You can create your own key combination on the command line or use the graphical interface. SYNOPSIS keymacro is a tool that lets you easily create shortcuts to command line programs, shells, file managers, text editors, shell scripts and websites. The app is fully customizable. You can define your own keyboard shortcuts, run multiple programs simultaneously, define your own mappings for all these programs, edit the shortcut’s title and description and assign a keyboard shortcut to open a shell, launch a file manager or a program etc.

FEATURES Create your own keyboard shortcuts: You can create your own keyboard shortcuts (that are nothing like the pre-defined ones of Linux) and assign them to any application, shell, file manager or program on your system. Run multiple programs at once: There are two main ways to launch multiple programs simultaneously. You can type multiple lines of command or you can define a shortcut for a command line program that is capable of launching multiple windows. Edit keyboard shortcuts: In addition to defining a new keyboard shortcut, you can edit the existing ones to customize them further. You can add or remove programs, add mappings for your favorite editor, add one click shortcuts for command line programs and much more. Git Integration: Whenever you make a change to your current keyboard shortcuts, the app will automatically store them to the configuration file and use the same file every time you start the app. Text Editor Integration: You can use text editor integrations, so that any text editor you choose to use will be mapped with a keyboard shortcut. In addition to this, if you have a configuration file created for a program like geany, you can use this integration. Open URL shortcuts: You can define a keyboard shortcut to launch your favorite web browser. Dashboard: You can use the built-in dashboard to quickly access all the keymacro commands and edit their settings. FULL-SCREEN (Tiling): Create a full-screen terminal on your Linux desktop. Recent Applications: Quickly launch
