Indian films: Supreme Court issues notice to censorship and media. Each house sends its notice to the Calcutta Administrative Court in the middle of the month, according to paragraphs 6 and 7. This notice may contain an article about Hinduism or the Islamic religion, as well as certain open phrases or words, such as "regime" or "religious intolerance." The article may be considered by the court later, but in any case, it must be sent even if the author didn't mind. Also, it can be rejected by the court on notice based on law, if such notice violates freedom of expression. Kajari Gujranwala, in an article in the Hindustan Times, addresses the issue of self-censorship and quotes a statement by Home Minister Manmohan Singh, which was made in 2011. In it, the minister spoke about the legality of this law and noted that there was not a single case of violation of the constitution that occurred during its application. "The law was adopted in accordance with the provisions of the constitution, there were no deviations from it," he said. "The notice sent to the courts was handwritten and cannot be forged because there is a unique statement every time at every moment." on violation of the article due to the absence of an event of a crime. He noted, however, that general rights to freedom of expression are inseparable from freedom of expression. He also said that there were two publications in 2017 - an article in Hindu and an article in Malay Times - that offered conflicting opinions. In the latter case, a publication was made that was not in accordance with the law. The purpose of the law at present is to strictly prevent any public expression that is detrimental to public order and security, including expressions such as "divine" and "limitless" and others of a similar type. Judge Sivera emphasized that a law on the protection of feelings in the sphere of relations between people and society would be more appropriate in relation to public policy, rather than individual statements. This provision, he said, should have been made part of the new constitution. H. Mander writes in his article that the Supreme Court removed past prohibitions on the operation of the law, but he believes that, at the moment, it is still not valid, since it has not been put into practice
