What I'm trying to do is increase the size of the component while still using the default loading symbol. I've tried setting the contentHeight and contentWidth to a larger number, and the symbol is still the same size. I also tried setting the width and height of the VBox in which the content is displayed but that didn't work either. The content is in a VBox inside a BorderContainer. Below is my code. private function uploadCompleted(e:Event):void { loading.visible = false; var upload:Uploader = e.target as Uploader; upload.contentLoader.height = 160; upload.contentLoader.width = 160; upload.contentLoader.setContentHeight(160); upload.contentLoader.setContentWidth(160); upload.contentLoader.autoLoad = true; } A: The answer is, the contentHeight and contentWidth properties are ignored. I found a simple workaround though. I use the LoaderInfo's createLoaderInfo() function. I'm able to get a reference to the ContentLoader so I can set the contentHeight and contentWidth manually. For example, in the uploadCompleted event handler: var loaderInfo:LoaderInfo = upload.contentLoader.createLoaderInfo(); loaderInfo.contentHeight = 160; loaderInfo.contentWidth = 160; A
