"negotiation would begin immediately, and we had about a week before we were scheduled to report for work." Indeed, were the Company's sales force actually negotiating with each of the appellants, none would then have had knowledge that what the Company was representing was mere rumor and conjecture. In the final analysis, we have only the Company's testimony that "discussions" were conducted in the main and that they were "negotiations." The Company apparently contends that it has such a large sales force in the area as to make any formal "negotiation" unnecessary. It further argues that the appellants were negotiating for the *447 very first time, which is inherently impossible. Since the Company had decided to terminate the appellants as of April 1, 1972, it argues that a simple telephone call or telegram could have done the trick. This argument ignores the fact that negotiations had in fact been conducted at least twice prior to April 1, 1972, namely, in November and December of 1971. We have found no Pennsylvania case on point. However, in Wicks v. Coal Operators Casualty Co., 218 F.2d 175 (3d Cir.1954), the court dealt with a somewhat similar situation and concluded as follows: [A]n employer who procures the services of an attorney has notice of what the attorney will advise and what positions that attorney will adopt in the investigation and settlement of a claim. The employer `is not entitled to say that what an attorney may say to the insured is no more binding on the insurer than is what the agent may say'.... As the trial court so cogently pointed out in its memorandum in support of its finding that the evidence of a proposed settlement was received in evidence without objection: This is a 570a42141b
