This invention relates to hydrotherapy and in particular to a floating pool based hydrotherapy device.

The use of hydrotherapy and pools have been the province of many health care facilities, particularly, therapeutic centers, spas and private facilities. It is also utilized in other settings for personal enjoyment, such as in hospitals and nursing homes. For the most part, such pools have had to be somewhat stationary or have required significant infusions of power and/or water to move the pool and create the requisite pressure and flow to deliver the desired therapeutic action to the user. In situations where hydrotherapy is used for therapeutic purposes such as use of the pool for hydrotherapy for arthritic conditions, and the like, there is a need for a
