(The Associated Press) NEW YORK – The New York Rangers have no shortage of questions to answer heading into Game 2 of the Eastern Conference Final against the Philadelphia Flyers on Thursday. They have answered some of them in the past 24 hours, in a very literal sense. The City of Brotherly Love was a pretty tough place to play when the Rangers last won a playoff series in June, 2014. Now the visiting team has a new co-owners and an owner who openly questioned his team's focus in the lead-up to a third-round matchup with the Penguins. So far there are no signs the Rangers have been helped any by that change. They've been all over the ice. "I think the biggest thing is we need to be a little bit more consistent and we need to be a little more slick with the puck," said coach Alain Vigneault, who can look back on two meetings with the Flyers in the 2012 playoffs and one in the second round last year. "Just little things that you say, and you practice, and you talk about, but it doesn't show until you're in a situation where you do have the puck and you're on the ice. "We're a better team than we showed in Game 1, but you're gonna have games where you show your true colors." New York will have to be in top form if it's going to keep pace with Philadelphia, which last reached the Eastern Conference Final in 2013. The Flyers, who led the Chicago Blackhawks 3-1 in the opening round before getting upset, are 13-2 when trailing after the first period and 6-0 when trailing after the second period in this postseason. The Flyers have
