Toggles dynamic display A great variety of hand-held power tools such as hand-held circular saws, angle grinders, belt sanders, sander/finishing stools and the like, are used for cutting, grinding, sanding, finishing and the like of workpieces. These tools generally include a power source such as an internal combustion engine or electric motor, and usually include a forward end formed with a nosepiece into which a router, grinder, belt sander, or the like is insertable. In order to use such power tools, such as the above-mentioned router, a workpiece is brought into engagement with the tool by a person. During use of the tool, the workpiece is typically secured to a fence, or the like, by a vise, clamps or other means. The tool is brought into engagement with the workpiece by a person by opening and closing the jaws of the tool relative to the workpiece. As the workpiece is secured to the fence or the like, the person will use a feeler gauge to confirm that the workpiece is appropriately located at the designated position. Using such a feeler gauge will ensure that the workpiece has not been moved during the cutting or finishing operation. However, use of a feeler gauge is cumbersome and requires the presence of the person using the tool. In addition, using such a feeler gauge prevents the person from fully engaging the tool with the workpiece. For this reason, it is desirable to provide a means for securing the workpiece to a fence, or the like, during use of the tool. In addition, it is desirable to provide an arrangement for securing the workpiece to the tool during use of the tool. Environmental exposures (e.g. smoking, pesticide exposures, and exposures to sol

Q: Applet scrolling How do I disable scrolling with an applet? I tried the following in the java code of the applet:

public void start() { Container c = getContentPane();
    c.setFocusable(false); c.setFocusTraversalKeysEnabled(false);

However, when I hit the down arrow, a window appears. Thanks in advance for any help.

A: Try this: `c.setFocusTraversalKeysEnabled(false);`

A: Setting `focusTraversalKeysEnabled` to `false` should work. The problem is that the `JScrollPane` that comes with applet support is focused
