If you have ever played the original Toxic Bunny, you will probably be instantly recognized by the updated graphic. It's a 2D platform game similar to Super Meat Boy and Uninvited, it's a title I just couldn't resist talking about. This game is definitely a recommend for platform game lovers, it will definitely drag you in and keep you hooked. I can't wait to see what's next for Toxic Bunny! Build your immunity to a virus to stop a whole population from dying in this Retro-Style point and click puzzle game. The critically acclaimed CRUMB BLONDE by Techland and Frictional Games has received a new neon makeover! In Cult of the Apocalyptic Flesh, you help a team of scientists solve a series of perplexing puzzles that are intertwined with a global apocalypse. In this game, you will have to explore different hallways and sometimes find yourself descending deeper into the deadly depths of hell. You will be confronted by all kinds of gruesome creatures, corrupted and lethal. Cult of the Apocalyptic Flesh (CRUMB BLONDE) uses a procedural level generation system, which means levels will be exactly the same but generated from a deeper and more complex world. This new neon makeover will make you feel like one of the old school CRUMP enthusiasts, and I hope you will enjoy playing this small effort by the talented duo. XCOM: Enemy Unknown is out on Android to the delight of a lot of players, but it was never meant to be Android-friendly. Yep, the game had a HTC Vive controller for you to play it with. But the version on Google Play is pretty much just a port of the game, and it's missing all the neat stuff from the Vive version. To get that you have to buy the non-HTC Vive version and use the Vive PC app to play it on your computer. However, there's now an APK out that should let you use any Bluetooth-connected trackers as the Vive controllers. So how does it look on the HTC Vive? Well, it's pretty good, but it's not quite as good as the Vive PC version, which is what HTC used to make them. The simple reason for that is that they haven't made a version of it that works with their own headset, so it's a reference implementation using SteamVR instead. A request
