The ruling may be appealed. "The company is reviewing the matter with legal counsel, and will determine next steps at that time," Qunaba said. The ruling will also likely prompt more lawsuits against Philadelphia Catholic, said William Thornley, executive director of the Union County bar, which has 1,500 lawyers and more than 6,000 lawyers working for law firms, which are part-time attorneys allowed to work in the public sector. "These trials are extremely expensive, time-consuming and draw a lot of attention," he said, noting that big out-of-town firms are likely to come into the area to take on the cases. Thornley said the first round of a lawsuit against Philadelphia Catholic from a former patient is now pending, a class action claiming the VA paid off the hospital so it could ensure the doctors received bonuses and provided sub-standard care. When the hospitals faced merger investigations in the past, Thornley said he could not recall any of them have gone through with a merger.The input conductance and the membrane potential of the T 1cdb36666d
