You are here: Hello sir, i have canon Pixma MP250, on some days ago I will forget my driver and printer ink. and now im on the market don't find my driver and printer ink Please help me with your code. Note that hexcode is something totally different from hexadecimal. Hex code is a sequence of numbers written as hexadecimal numbers. In normal text it has no meaning. Please try to explain in english what exactly you want. Canon Pixma MP250 is a 4.8 inches printer with 1200 dpi resolution and 256 colors. Hex code is simply the numbers 12, 6 and 0 As such 1-2-3-4-5-6-7 would be 01234456 and 01234567 or the English equivalent 123456. The reason why the code has to match is because the printer knows what the message string is going to be but when you print a command, you should always match the decimal number that corresponds to the string. The first hex code is the sequence number that is returned when you put a command in a bit of paper and hit the printer. The second hex code is the sequence number that is returned when you put the paper in the slot and the message is printed. You should do the same, the same sequence number (1-2-3-4-5-6-7) should always be returned when you put the paper in the slot.
