Community College of Allegheny County The Community College of Allegheny County (CCAC) is a community college in Western Pennsylvania, United States. It is a four-year college, with most undergraduates completing their degree in four to five years. The main campus is located in the city of Monroeville, Pennsylvania and is situated on a campus. CCAC offers 22 undergraduate degrees, including Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Science in Nursing, Bachelor of Business Administration, and Associate of Applied Science degrees. CCAC has a network of academic centers and academic programs located throughout the greater Pittsburgh area. History The college was founded in 1961 to help Pittsburgh's west side receive a post-secondary education after it was denied state funding by the commonwealth of Pennsylvania at the time, and also to serve nearby Allegheny County. Prior to this time, education for people living in the west side of Pittsburgh was at the ninth grade level or higher, which was a result of the high cost of education and a lack of government initiatives in the area. Campus CCAC is located in the city of Monroeville, Pennsylvania. It has of space across ten buildings and more than 130 classrooms. The campus is centered around a pedestrian mall and has views of the Monongahela River and downtown Pittsburgh. It is also near the intersection of Route 830 and Route 28, which links the college to casinos and restaurants. Academics CCAC offers over 29 undergraduate degrees and one graduate degree. Some of these bachelor's degrees include English, General Sciences, Psychology, Biology, History, Political Science, Geography, Humanities, and even Archaeology. All degrees are non-thesis degrees, meaning no student has to complete all four years of undergraduate studies in order to earn their degree. The college offers a Bachelor of Applied Science in Automotive Technology, a program used in automotive careers. In 2017, the college partnered with several local trucking companies in order to offer up to 60 positions in auto-
