Griffin Smith - Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia Griffin Smith (August 20, 1986 - April 4, 2008), was an American murder victim. Smith, of Mill Valley, California, was 17 years old when he was shot in the chest and killed by San Francisco police in April 2008. Smith was shot after a car chase. His death marked the first time an unarmed teen in California was shot by the police. (sources: newsone.com; cnn.com)Which U.S. Cities See the Most Organic Food Labeling? According to a study published in the journal Agricultural and Resource Economics, organic food consumers are generally better educated and more affluent than their non-organic counterparts. That being said, the study's author, Matthew D. Lieberman of Dartmouth College, points out that sometimes the biggest difference in spending is between the "mostly" organic and conventional consumers. There is also a higher percentage of "mostly" organic consumers in some states and cities, compared to other states and cities. Here are some of the cities with the most "mostly organic" consumers: Overall, the study found that organic consumers (defined as purchasing foods with at least "mostly organic" labels) spend more money than non-organic consumers. On average, organic consumers spent about $850 more per year than non-organic consumers.
