EA's technical team worked closely with the NFL to collect the player data to take full advantage of this technology. And while it took two years of development to perfect, the project was ultimately worth it. "Each one of the players was right there on the sidelines," EA SPORTS® FIFA Digital Creative Director Marcus Sorel said. "We all worked with the players to build the in-game animations, collecting data and collecting data of touches. We got feedback and got to see where we could improve things. It was a long process but we made it happen." EA made sure to get the player data from high-profile athletes as well. Gloster the Great, NFL legend Dwight Clark, NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell and Seahawks quarterback Russell Wilson all helped add their personalities to the game through the creative input from the NFL and the EA Sports community. "It was more a day in the life of a player, really," said NFL Players Association GM/Communications Director George Atallah, who was asked by EA SPORTS whether he worked with EA to get the player data for the project. “It’s an ongoing relationship and it can be taxing at times. But he is the ultimate professional. He did a great job. It is a labor of love and very cool to get to see it in the game.” The data was collected from 22 players in a series of motion capture suits which all players were required to wear for the game to accurately identify player and ball movement. The players were inside a “motion-capture box” which measured their motions and recorded their movements on a computer. The game uses the data to shape gameplay. And the simulation is all about the data. The in-game animations and coverage are based on the player model and the rig was able to create the “future” look of the game, in motion. “As technology has gotten smarter, we are getting closer and closer to that vision,” Sorel said. “If you didn’t have motion capture, you could not build the level of accuracy and fidelity that would be found in Fifa 22 Crack. You can’t fake it. That is the goal. We can’t get there without data, and that is what we are collecting through motion capture.” EA used data from TopDrawerSoccer, the official ball of

FIFA is the official videogame of the English Premier League - the world's best-selling soccer league with over 770 million players. With all 15 EPL clubs and over 700 high-profile international players, FIFA gives you the authentic playing experience and the fun, in-depth gameplay that have become hallmarks of the EA SPORTS FIFA franchise. Publisher: Electronic Arts Inc. Developer: Electronic Arts Inc. Genre: Sports Overview In FIFA 22, take on your friends in 1-on-1 matches, 4-on-4 team matches, or even in brand new modes. Be a goalkeeper and earn your stripes in the keeper clinic, or test your striking in the new set piece mode, the one-on-one knockout tournament, and be on the lookout for new give-and-go dribbling moves. Go head-to-head with your team in the quick and easy five-a-side tournament. In addition to these new game modes, FIFA 22 gives you the opportunity to experience the intensity of the EPL live in the new battle royale mode. FEATURES FIFA 22 is all-new and features improvements across the board. First-person control is the default and the gameplay has been adjusted to make you a better goalkeeper. The launch pad replaces the kick-to-pass mechanic with an “accordion”-like play in which you’ll have the opportunity to take a touch and then shoot, but the other ball-carrier will often be able to take the shot first. FIFA 22 places a greater emphasis on player intelligence. This enhances the gameplay of the EPL to create more meaningful action. For instance, defending your box can now be more challenging, as you can expect opposition players to look for new ways to bypass your defense. You can also use your

APM (Action Points Management) to make the right decisions in the heat of the game, and make better use of your teammates to come out on top. Refereeing is more reactive and less rigid, encouraging players to express themselves with more tricks and feints. Whether in defense, midfield or attack, refereeing is important. This also means that players need to decide themselves when and when not to foul or take risks. All-new movement animations bring the game's individuals and their running patterns to life. Player body language is more pronounced, and animation timing has been tweaked
