The Merchant of Venice, Act II, Scene 1
The Merchant of Venice (威尼斯) Venice, Italy, 1589
Act II, Scene 1 - "The Readie and Easie Way"
"O what a fortune would I not give to be in Venice!"
"Well", she replied, "you may; but you may break your neck in the bargain."
"Nay", said Launcelot, "I do but jest: I would not break my neck, though I am free to break your pate."
"Wry-mouth", said the lady, "if thou beest mad in earnest, or if thou beest not, thou art the most obstinate fool, and the most hard-hearted dog in Venice. Thy mother's curses rot thee: she is even now in hell, calling thee in the lowest deeps there."
He replied, I am not mad: I am not fool; and I was never hard hearted till now.
When I was in England, out of Holy Land, I was the most courteous prince that ever kept house in my time; I was the very prince of all England: I was not then hard hearted.

What's new:

) The Paddington neighborhood, one block north of Grand Junction, is Chayee's home on Nevada Street. As in the other locations, he treated us with warm, homemade breakfast food. We walked a few blocks to the frozen yogurt shop Pinkberry, which gave us a sampling of about six different flavors. Chayee had told us that he visits many places throughout Denver before settling on a spot. After our many sugary trimmings, we walked to the Westwood substation, where the county-owned airport lands, where construction on the giant empty lot began in earnest last year. It's too soon to tell whether the murkier urban terrain or the green spaces of Dillon Reservoir will make this site a better choice for a private airport than the 35,000-acre Don Neal Municipal Airport on top of the South Platte River in Stapleton. The Westwood site also allows better access to Denver's primary internal airport than Neal's gives to Lowry. At least two recent proposals submitted to Denver did not go far enough to capture the attention of county staff. It's possible some might still want to explore doing a project in the Westwood/Dillon Reservoir area, but I don't think they'd be completely satisfied unless it were tied into the Denver Sky Tram. With all of the planning challenges facing airport and transit officials, it's important to remember that such efforts can improve the lives of everyone in the city. Proposed new and improved airport facilities would create much-needed jobs for private industry, and the regular, reliable, on-time, non-stormy, one-recess-per-hour airport service would go a long way toward making life easier and more predictable for those who only have a daily commute to make and a place to park their car before they do that ride every day. We promise: You won't find any seedy underbelly of low ticket prices and deplaning passengers in our airport, because at Denver International Airport you're always treated right.
