Renteria as the Sound Editor Giancarlo Rondolino From jazz to percussion, rhythm, and noise, this new book offers a detailed and original look at the diverse ways that sound has been used in hip hop. Giancarlo Rondolino's edited collection includes a great variety of musicians, styles, and genres. Interviews with the artists as well as the book's many sidebars, essays, and history make the book a valuable resource for both research and collection. Renteria as the Sound Editor Giancarlo Rondolino Description In his final book, third-generation hip hop producer and composer Giancarlo Rondolino writes a story about music in and outside the genres that influenced him: jazz, noise, funk, hard bop, and krautrock. Drawing from personal and professional experience, he includes fascinating interviews with some of today's most important musicians, as well as contributions from many of the engineers who've worked with them. The resulting book is as much a history of sound as it is a history of music.

Rondolino has published numerous articles, recordings, and records as a composer, producer, performer, and musician. His work has been broadcast and exhibited at various international festivals and institutions, including the Ars Nova in New York, ICA in London, the Spoleto Festival in Charleston, and the Monterey Jazz Festival. He has won many awards, including a Grammy for "Change Your Mind," which he also produced. His work has been played on NPR's All Things Considered and spoken word station XRAY. He has performed with Cassandra Wilson, Joni Mitchell, George Clinton, and many others. Rondolino is also a doctoral student in
