Obvious first time party play after playing the demo. The music by the way is by the same composer that has worked on X-Com and Company of Heroes. Don't be put off if you know or have played the original 3rd Strike. This game is the same and the gameplay is really much improved. Features of Game 3rd Strike including story, characters, boss fights, and enemies: The story is a wonderful amalgam of Harry Potter, Star Wars, and real history of the English country house of Wolsey. The enemies are wizards, crone witches, etc, all in a variety of weird and wonderful creatures. The bosses are not just creatures, but the most powerful witches in the game. Will Glow has hidden coins that are hidden and scattered throughout the game, there are 5 different types of hidden coins, all of them have a different graphic and sound effect as they are discovered. The bosses are very challenging, as are the rest of the enemies. There are 6 difficulty settings. There are 3 difficulty modes, Normal, Hard, and Ultra-Hard. There is a truly addicting magic system, you can set some simple spells and then place them on your hand like a smartphone. As you play you get status effects to change up the way you play the game. You can increase and decrease health, rate of fire, ability to shield, etc. While practicing, you collect more ammo which will make your healing spells stronger, so you can use your most powerful spells right away and get more moves in that round. Many spells have a range of what could be called hero frames, and you can target enemies while retreating. You can use many different non-melee spells as well. There are a lot of customizations to your character. Will Glow is also completely customizable. You can customize your character with face and body paint, hair color, hair styles and different clothing options. There is a boost for low fps which is extremely useful, but it can't boost to 100. The music in the game is also by the same composer that worked on the other X-Com games. There are very catchy songs and tunes from the English countryside that sounds like a cross between hip hop, reggae and modern music. What's new:

"Glow the Wisp" is a song co-written and recorded by American country music group Restless Heart. It was released in August 1991 as the fourth single from the album Live Here in the World. It was written by the band's then principal songwriter, John D. Loudermilk, and his brother, Kevin, who also produced the record. Background According to Restless Heart's biographer William Ricketts: In 1989, Restless Heart released their album Walk a Thin Line. It was their most successful album, and it is generally considered their most effective album, with a prominent mix of diehard traditional country, modern metal and power pop undertones. However, it received some mixed reviews. Media outlets called it "a diverting response to a common country music genre" and some critics felt the album was too elaborate and that the band had failed to tap into the best in country music. In the fall of 1991, Restless Heart turned down an offer to join Bob Seger's Silver Bullet Band, while a call was out for a new lead vocalist. The band were major in-house at RCA Records, and lead singer Aimee Allen had enlisted for a summer vacation project. Allen's agent suggested the rest of the bandmates ask her to join the band while she was on vacation in Southern California. The decision to replace her was made at the group's New York City concert that fall. As the band's popularity was on the rise, Restless Heart began performing the song "Glow the Wisp" at concerts. Since they released the song, it has become a Top 20 hit for the band. Several artists have covered the song. Restless Heart's recording of the song included a characteristic 1990s crunchy power pop sound rather than the gritty whiskey sound featured in earlier work. At the time of its release, "Glow the Wisp" was Restless Heart's second biggest hit on the Hot Country Songs charts after "Over" in 1988. The recording was certified Gold by the Recording Industry Association of America, and produced three singles on the Billboard Hot Country Singles & Tracks charts: a #19 country hit in 1991, "Big Dreams" in 1992, and "Blaze of Gold" in 1993. Track listing 7" single "Glow the Wisp" - 3:41 "Who's Been Sleeping Around" - 3:13 12" single "Glow the
