4/5 Graphics/Sound: 5/5 Story: 4/5 Gameplay: 3/5 Character: 3/5 Multiplayer: -/5 After using a zombie apocalypse as a frame of reference for premise, designer J.J. Perizi takes his idea a step further by creating a 21st Century backdrop for fantasy. It sets you on a quest to solve an ancient mystery, while getting to know the bandits who hold the town under ransom. It's by no means a perfect game. Enemy units will sometimes teleport right past you before you've finished drawing your weapon, and the camera will shake occasionally, even as you jump to avoid attack. Though you can return to towns and markets to gather resources, the lack of a map makes your journey basically random. Even as you break new ground, Shadowgate retains a feeling of familiarity. That makes it even more frustrating than usual when things go wrong. Fortunately, that's where the experience starts to become more interesting. Shadowgate relies heavily on a dungeon-crawl style interface, which makes the game feel much more at home in a world of magic than it would in a modern setting. And this changes things up in a whole new direction. The encounter with demons that opens the game's adventure never ends, and it sets the tone for the rest of the game. It helps that Shadowgate is well-written. There aren't any awkward, unfinished notes. The game may not reinvent itself, but it does succeed in reinventing itself. Game

Bans of Rage - Internal Pack Bans of Ruin - Pack Get ready! Warrants are out, the Black Cadet Raid is coming up and you won't make the cut to Hero of Lore without it. At this point it's not a secret, but it's here all the same: I'm officially constructing the second pack of Kickstarter Expected items for Warlords of Draenor. Several players have expressed interest in several items and I just thought a little recap as to what was available, who has them and what were the priorities for the bunch of players I've sussed out as wanting these things. The My Anger was limited to around 200, but that was enough to make up for dropping the Runic Gems in the My Anger. The My Rage seems to be doing quite well outside of the Black Cadet's Raid, and I felt the two were an appropriate reward. The Torrignon Forge and Pink Cadet Promo were big sellers in the ASF, and they're still proving popular in the free-to-play era. These 3 items were all promised as "come late to Warlords", so everyone that requested one is getting them, even if their reservation time came a bit later in production. So Dragonhunt Weapons... Not like it's a random... Like how much? After the 10/2 bombshell, we get tighter on the Grenadier, I chose to make the Dragonhunt Shotgun a Lieutenant reward. As we stood on 6,000, we had that whole range of possible Lieutenant rewards covered, but people wanted a fixed range. When we looked at the missing items to fill that slot, the Dragonhunt Shotgun looked the most compelling. Now, don't get me wrong... This is a great thing for Lieutenant players, but for their stats and the Trough of Pain, it would have been a bit of a stretch. The only caveat was that it did lack a silver rank glyph, but it still worked for me. I decided it was an easy distribution win and rolled with it. Now that we've published, perhaps that glyph will get swapped in. One of the interesting things about The Shadow's Daughter is that for all the RNG of the equation, it's currently the rarest and most requested companion, if only because until now it was the only thing viable for the spec. As rewards went live for Warlords of Draenor

I was really shocked... :( What other project are you working on right now? Any plans for other forms of entertainment? Right now, my wife and I are collaborating on a screenplay for a narrative-driven, sci-fi game in the most unique universe ever. I love it. It's really cool... I really liked the spirit of John's animation, it was really beautiful and I can't wait to play the game. You should make a sequel to this! A sequel to this game would be a great project to work on. In fact, we're still thinking about a sequel, even if the game can be completed

Thanks again. I really enjoyed this. Thank you so much! I was able to explore some of my own experience writing this game with my father's passing, so I'm really happy it resonated with you!
