Features Key:

A PvP online component: In order to increase the enjoyment of the game, PvP (Player vs. Player) matches are available. Compete with players from around the world to see who's the best.

Content with a rich fantasy setting: As described previously, the game is set in the Lands Between. The world combines the high fantasy mythological setting of Norse with ancient civilizations, ancient technology, and various monsters, making this an interesting world that is not merely a fantasy world but is at the same time also transporting us to the future.

A clear depiction of good and evil: The world is full of the power of balance. The craftsmen are incarnate of the lords of the world of creation, who led into a tortuous future. The evil power are those who devised the claws to devour and chaos.

Role-playing combat system: Customize your character freely, combine weapons, and equip armor to increase your power. No skills are required, and craft items can be freely combined and special runes can even be crafted to improve its attributes.

All the legendary creatures ever seen in fantasy make an appearance: An all-encompassing system with a lot of vigor around the large numbers of monsters, even if the weather has been changed to a rainy landscape such as a raining forest. There are 1,000 monsters and rare monsters. Monsters that appear are displayed with rare equipment as well as magic and powerful weapons.

A unique RPG system: Virtual items exist in the fantasy world called the Arts, which are items that are used to combine and reproduce almost all the items in the game. You can enhance the attributes and skills of the character with your own idle stats as well as the Art to make your character.

Your own special Rune: You can freely create a Rune. By combining various runes, craft items can be created. An environment where you can create weapons and armor to make it unique is also included.

Left-wing talk show host Joy Behar expressed her confusion on her show Friday over why anyone would vote for billionaire Donald Trump. "I have no idea why anybody would vote for Trump," Behar said after playing a video of Trump telling Fox Business host Maria Bartiromo that "gold can make you rich." The Democrat and Trump campaign surrogate went on to suggest the New York tycoon tell voters that "gold can make you rich and maybe he will." "That was an interesting little jump into talking about a no-brainer premise: You have a candidate who says, 'Gold will make you rich,'" Behar said. "I had no idea what he was doing." "Why would people vote for him? We're not going to see the ads for gold. It's like, 'Oh, gold makes you rich and he'll give you gold.'" "I think if it were me, I would go out and buy some gold because I don't want to have a run-in with him." Behar also complained about how "Trump thinks of women as pieces of meat

End-of-life decisions for terminally ill patients: attitudes of nursing home staff. Few palliative care standards include recommendations as to the scope of care that should be provided by nursing home staff. Although the nursing home plays a central role in caring for terminally ill patients, the extent to which this palliative role is enacted is unclear. This study examines staff attitudes regarding end-of-life decision making of terminally ill residents receiving care in nursing homes. Qualitative data were collected from in-depth interviews with 29 staff nurses and nurses aides, and questionnaires were returned by 246 staff. Interviews were also conducted with representatives of the organization in charge of the care of the residents, as well as with the resident's family or with the resident himself. Staff attitudes about end-of-life decision making for residents receiving palliative care in nursing homes was characterized by ambiguity and tension in regard to the degree of disclosure and autonomy allowed to residents and families. Attitudes were not, however, uniformly negative, and some staff interviewed expressed contentment and satisfaction with their caregiving role. These data suggest that the delivery of care for terminally ill patients in nursing homes will need to be responsive to diverse and sometimes conflicting attitudes of staff about issues of quality of care and patient autonomy. This suggests that service providers in nursing homes will need to assume responsibility for deciding as a group what kind of care to provide, and that family members may have to develop advocacy skills to protect their interests.

Q: How can I stop/remove fields from the fio output I am running a RedHat machine which runs memtest86+ for 66 days. I am planning on rebooting it back to factory defaults. I thought I might use fio to have it copy /dev/zero to my physical disk to "mock" a hard drive read/write test on the real disk. However, I want to stop the output being printed to the console and I don't see a way to do this.

I seem to remember reading about reading the 'no_console' arg to fio but I don't see
