Now, if you don't know how to use Photoshop, this article is for you. In this Photoshop tutorial, I'll show you the basic and intermediate steps to starting out with the most popular image manipulation program on the market. Step 1. Opening Photoshop from Windows Before you can start doing anything, first you need to open Photoshop. To open Photoshop from Windows, click the Start menu's photo button and then click the blue Windows icon. From the "Windows Start Menu" page, choose the "Utilities" tab at the top and then select "Open Photoshop." A new window should open with a Photoshop icon in the upper right corner. Click this icon to start the application. Step 2. Installing Photoshop on Mac Download the latest version of Photoshop from the Adobe Download website. If you don't know how to do that, see the Photoshop download page. When the download is complete, click the downloaded file and press the Return key. This will bring up the "Open" or "Run" dialog box. In the "Open" dialog box, click "Open" and Photoshop should start. Step 3. Checking Out Photoshop The Photoshop application is pretty straightforward, and only a few things are different depending on whether you're on Windows or a Mac. In the far upper right corner of the screen, click the Image and Layers tab. If you haven't created a new document before, you'll see a small box to the right that says "New." In that box, select the white button that says, "New." The selected image file should now have a white "New Document" box instead of the blank box that you had before. It's important to note, though, that the white box will only be displayed while you have an actual Photoshop document open. If you have no open Photoshop document, you'll need to create one. To create a new document, click the New Document button in the corner of the image window and select the white box to create a new document. A new, blank document should open. Now, click the File button to load the "Open a File" dialog box. In the "Open" dialog box, click the "Open or Create" button. From the "Open or Create" dialog box, select the white rectangle to locate a new Photoshop file. Depending on how many layers you've selected, you'll have an additional menu to

Russia warns Germany it could be forced to “pay a heavy price” over Nord Stream 2. Russia has warned Germany it could face serious consequences if it continues to block the Nord Stream 2 project, which Moscow plans to complete by the end of this year. The Russian Foreign Ministry said on June 17 that Berlin “would have to pay a heavy price for its actions,” amid uncertainty over whether it will veto a final resolution in the European Parliament on the pipeline project. “To what extent the German government would intervene, there is no answer to that question,” Russian Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Maria Zakharova said in a statement. “That’s why we have to see to what extent the German government will implement the EU legislation that it was given,” she said. “The country’s economy will ultimately suffer if it is cut off from the transatlantic cable, which is already fraying,” she added. In the statement, Zakharova also pointed out that the German export credit agency had recently allowed certain “adverse effects” of the project to be taken into account in deciding whether to approve German projects. “By no means is [the German decision] binding but it is a signal that the country’s economy could suffer adverse consequences if it continues to block the Nord Stream 2 project,” she said. Earlier in May, German Economy Minister Peter Altmaier said that Berlin would not veto the EU vote and that a consensus with the EU is necessary to ensure Nord Stream 2 implementation. But an alliance of European, Ukrainian, Baltic and Central European member states have vowed to veto a final resolution. “No one should think that the EU will not punish Germany,” Putin said in a televised address to the Russian public on May 20. Germany is the only EU member which has not expressed support for Nord Stream 2, with Berlin instead trying to convince Brussels that the pipeline is too risky for Europe. “We want to be included in the decision-making process, while Berlin wants to wait for one more year,” Tatarstan’s Foreign Minister, Tatyana Baikarova, was quoted as saying by Interfax. The Kremlin is working to improve the vote’s chances in the European Parliament, with the head of state’s press service,
