Album Blasted Fortress Official Soundtrack Album is a soundtrack album by progressive rock band Porcupine Tree, released on 6 October 2008. Musical style and themes Unlike the band's previous album, The Incident, which featured upbeat tunes with chillout moments, the soundtrack album is dark, with intense, noise-rock soundscapes. All tracks are lesser known and recorded between 1993 and 2004 when the band released their third, fourth and fifth albums. It features 8 tracks, two remixes, and a DVD on the cover. Tracks 1 to 4 and 10 to 12 were featured in the 2008 film The Boat. Tracks 1 to 4 and 8 were featured in the 2010 film Proxima. Reception Reception from professional media was generally favourable. Some critics praised the album's use of 'industrial' sounds, which are unavailable on most soundtracks, and particularly praised the inclusion of "Existence Is Now / In the Absence of Light" as one of the album's high points. "Existence Is Now" was most notably featured as the theme song to the 11th season of the television show, Bones, which aired from September to November 2012, and is used to book-end each episode. The soundtrack was released to very positive reviews, such as 3:AMs John Aizlewood (who gave the soundtrack an 8.5/10 rating and commented "Blasted Fortress is one of the finest Porcupine Tree albums yet") and Gavin Mueller, the editor of the 2009 edition of Dusted magazine, who gave the soundtrack a positive review for "revealing all of the band's creativity to not just new audiences, but longtime fans as well". In a more mixed review, Melodic.net said that in terms of composition and production, the album is "equal parts dark and beautiful." The review continued to say that the album is "more than worthy of a listen," but also commented that "it's not exactly a masterpiece." Classic Rock gave the album a less favourable review, giving the album a 4 out of a 5 rating. The review noted the song "A Worker on a Shingle" is "absolutely magnificent," and rated the album one of the "Top Albums of 2008", but commented that the closing track, "In the Absence of Light", is "pretty damn depressing." Track listing All music and lyrics written by Steven Wilson. "Die Haute Sauvagerne

In the optic nerve, axons establish a highly complex, three-dimensional relationship with support glial cells. These glial cells show remarkable morphological plasticity during development. Glial cells are morphologically transformed from neurons during growth of the optic nerve and, in some circumstances, become postmitotic neurons again. Different types of glial cells are found in the developing optic nerve, including oligodendrocytes, astrocytes and retinal ganglion cells. Differentiation of the three types of glia is determined by the position of the optic nerve in the retino-optic tract of the embryo: the optic nerve is first contacted by the optic stalk and receives trophic support from the axons of retinal ganglion cells, from which the oligodend
