The Utterly Anonymous Author of This Strange Book You Have Just Finished. Sorry About The Inconvenient Storm, But We Have A Deal! You Give Me Your Name, I'll Give You Forever. . You might say to the man who you think is an intern at a publishing company about something that would be considered experimental, or The first act in a new play, or even do a piece of "research" to find out how it would be structured, written, and introduced. . But this book is not something you can put your hands to, turn it around, and put it back into a spine and be done with it. It will follow you. And one day, when you're fifty-five, I will knock on your door and tell you I am your father and I love you. . If you're worried about the writer's life, think again. Because this book is a work of many writers. . Begin again, yes? . Because the man who you think is your husband is not your husband. He is the keeper of lost causes, the utterly anonymous author of this strange book you have just finished. Sorry about the inconvenient storm, but we have a deal! . You give me your name, I'll give you forever. . Then you can move to another city, another house, and another name. . Begin again. . And this time, no man has a right to ruin your happiness. There is no way to trace you. You are anonymous. . Yet I am your father. . . Therefore, begin again. . I

Since this is my first function I'm trying to figure out why I can only reference a variable once in a string. Here is what I'm trying to do: char *function(char *e){ e += 1; return e; } char *function(char *e){ e += 2; return e; } char *function(char *e){ e += 3; return e; } char *function(char *e){ e += 4; return e; } char *function(char *e){ e += 5; return e; } e = function('?'); I want the output to be the question mark but the code won't work. Can someone help please? A: If you need to keep returning the same variable, you can allocate memory for it and work with it. I'd recommend looking at how string libraries in other languages work, and if there's something similar in C, stealing from it. The code would look something like: char *function(char *e){ //e points to some address on the stack where you store a string. //e is also a pointer pointing to the beginning of the string e += 1; if (e == strstr(e, "?")) { return e; } char* newe = malloc(strlen(e) + 1); strcpy(newe, e
