"Given the number of varied ways players can attack, combine and open up space for each other, we wanted to put even more power in players' hands," said lead gameplay developer Ben Gunn. "HyperMotion Technology allows us to do this by introducing a new layer of contextual awareness as players are able to instantly react to the subtle movements of their teammates and opponents, whether they be off-ball or on-ball. They'll be able to make split-second decisions about where to position and move their body to, winning the ball before the opposition. It's like having a small army of robots around you." The 'unique visual layer' layer of the game will also feature pre-defined animations and refined facial expressions for each player, allowing each of the 5,000+ player models to more naturally express emotion and feeling in real-time. In Fifa 22 Product Key, the game's AI will use real-time behavioural decision-making which will allow for unprecedented tactical thinking and decisions. New intelligent opponent and goalkeepers AI will include speed, positioning, movement patterns, out-of-the-dual-movement options, tackling and goalkeeping, as well as environments in which to develop their strategies. Offline, FIFA Ultimate Team will also get a host of new features and content updates. Starting with a new Ultimate Team Captain mode which will allow players to decide who will be their captain in an Ultimate Team to create the ultimate footballing dynasty! Other improvements to be introduced in FIFA Ultimate Team are: New interface - Players can now see the statline for one player selected in the tree, and can see a breakdown of his/her stats, to quickly pick the right players to fill the cards. New inbox messages - Players can now queue up new cards to view in their inbox, without having to start a new collection. Visual effects - Card rendering has been improved to offer more visual diversity. What's your favourite feature or mechanic in the upcoming version of FIFA? Let us know in the comments.
