One of the most promising games I've seen so far, is Slugrunner, which is being developed by a person named João Garcia. It looks like a game that would keep you busy for many hours, but as long as you work at it, you can beat the whole thing in just a few minutes. The premise of Slugrunner is simple – you are a slug, and you need to run as fast as you can through a field of trees. You're not quite sure of how to do that, since you haven't seen any other slugs running around. Thankfully, that's a good thing, because the trees are lined with explosives that can destroy you if you try to dash through them. You do need to learn how to move through a field of trees, but it's not that hard, as long as you have a little patience. There are several techniques that can be used to move through the trees quickly. You need to dodge the bombs by raising your speed, and keeping an eye on where the bombs are going to be. You can also get a leg up on your slugs competition if you remember to use your up key to zip through the trees, which is a lot faster than the ones in the game. Naturally, you want to get a head start
