Margaret of Denmark Margaret of Denmark (1205 – 5 January 1271) was queen of Norway as the spouse of Magnus VI, King of Norway. Margaret was the daughter of King Eric IV of Denmark and his first wife, Gunilla of Bjelbo. Life In 1208 she and her brother Eric, who was Earl of Pomerania, joined King Haakon IV of Norway on campaign against the Swedish crusaders in Småland. A marriage was arranged between Margaret and King Haakon on 26 December 1213. In 1215, Margaret and her brother were granted the county of Trøndelag in Norway as a condition for her marriage. However, they were subsequently unable to fulfill their obligations and in 1216, Haakon ordered them to cede the counties to his brother-in-law Håkon Håkonsson. Håkon had, however, not fulfilled his obligations either and in 1219, Haakon had him excommunicated by Pope Honorius III. In 1222, Margaret traveled to Denmark to help her father who was going through difficult times in the Low Countries. She soon married Eric II, who had succeeded her father as King of Denmark on 31 May 1223. The marriage was arranged by King Haakon VI of Norway, who thereby saved his own second marriage to Skålholt and the Kingdom of Norway. At the time, the marriage between Queen Margaret and King Eric was negotiated as a political marriage between his brother-in-law and King Haakon of Norway. The couple had a son, Magnus VI, who became the King of Norway. Queen Margaret and King Eric ruled jointly until Eric's death. In 1244, Margaret sent her son Magnus to the council in Bergen, which declared the son of the king's brother-in-law the rightful heir to the throne of Norway. In 1247, Haakon died and King Magnus VI became the sole king in Norway. Because of the joint reign of King Eric and Queen Margaret, the realm of

You are reviewing: Directory Organizer Deluxe Edition: Trial I downloaded this trial thinking that it would at least give me a starting point. It didn't. General The reason I don't recommend this is simple. I spent months trying to enter the information into this program. If you are attempting to enter someones address into a directory this program will not work. It will either not place the information where it needs to be or it will not enter the information at all. When I used a program that was helpful to me it showed on the left a preview of the directory that was loaded. This does not happen with this program.
