NEW DELHI: Actress and noted wildlife activist Neha Dhupia, who was allegedly attacked by a group of people of traditional Kashmiri and Pakistani origin near New Delhi, says she is not interested in any legal action in connection with the alleged attack. "I'm not very keen on taking legal action against those who attacked me. There is no need for me to take legal action because I feel that a free and independent nation has allowed me to live and work in their country," Dhupia told ET. "I have been attacked in the heart of Delhi. People from both sides of the border did it. I can't comprehend why they did this. I have never seen this side of the society. I was scared when it happened," she added. Dhupia said what angered her was that her attackers ran away when they saw the police coming. She also said that she didn't go for any police complaint as she was scared of a police report, and she would prefer a prison sentence if there was one. Speaking to ET, Dhupia said the incident happened as she was returning from a trip to Nepal, where she took a film crew to catch footage of the endangered Indian one-horned rhino for the documentary "Free Gandhi". She also said she was not scared of the men or their alleged intentions, and even though she was told that she would be attacked by men of the "other side", she believed that the unkempt Kashmiri and Pakistani-origin men were "ordinary men". "What they did was definitely wrong," Dhupia said. Dhupia who is a noted animal-rights activist and a wildlife expert also interacted with Delhi Chief Minister Arvind Kejriwal over the alleged incident. "...we see people who are not from our country, come to our country and cause problems. I believe that when I went for work, I had good intentions. But the ones who attacked me thought that I was like them and that I was a Kashmiri
