Aspirin use, aspirin resistance, and risk of venous thromboembolism: A meta-analysis of observational studies. The association between aspirin use and venous thromboembolism (VTE) risk is unclear. To examine the association between aspirin use and VTE, we performed a meta-analysis of observational studies. PubMed, Embase, the Cochrane Library, the Web of Science, and other sources were searched for studies reporting the association between aspirin use and risk of VTE. A random-effects model was used to calculate pooled odds ratios (ORs) and 95% confidence intervals (95% CIs) for VTE risk in users of low-dose aspirin and high-dose aspirin compared with nonusers of aspirin. Eleven studies, involving 1,154,817 individuals were included in this meta-analysis. The pooled OR for VTE risk was 0.85 (95% CI, 0.81-0.90) for low-dose aspirin and 0.75 (95% CI, 0.65-0.88) for high-dose aspirin. Subgroup analysis showed that aspirin use for the prevention of cardiovascular diseases was associated with a reduced risk of VTE. Our results indicated that aspirin use was significantly associated with a reduced risk of VTE, especially in patients with cardiovascular diseases.
