Q: JQuery Cycle Plugin with delayed slideshow I have a jquery cycle plugin in a project I am working on that cycles through a slideshow of images. When you switch through these images they "reveal" themselves. I want each image to go through the transition in 1 second increments and then when it is done, the next image changes. I am using the plugin that cycles through the images and I can get it to work with the "current image" setting to 1 so that it always starts with the first image. How do I extend this to cycle through the entire slideshow in 1 second increments and then when it is done cycle through the next image? Here is a bit of the html:

And here is the javascript:

jQuery(document).ready(function(){ jQuery("#slideshow").cycle({ fx:
'fade', speed: 'fast', timeout: 3000,
random: true, pause: true }); });

A: I believe the timeout property does that - it allows you to specify how long each slide should be displayed before looping through to the next slide:

jsfiddle $("#slideshow").cycle({ fx:
'fade', speed: 'fast', timeout: 3000,
random: true, pause: true });

You can set the interval to 1 second by using the speed setting as follows: jsfiddle
