What's New in the?

The initial trailer for Thor: Ragnarok teased a Thanos-like figure who Thor (Chris Hemsworth) is forced to battle. But if you look very closely at the trailer, you might just see the beginnings of a kick-ass fighting force of women alongside the Guardians of the Galaxy. We've got the first look at some of the Guardians fighting alongside Thor. The trailer for Thor: Ragnarok, the third installment in the Thor franchise, dropped yesterday and reveals that the movie will go back in time to pick up after Thor left Earth's orbit back in The Dark World. And it makes sense that Thor would go back to Earth to make sure that his friends in the Guardians are safe from the threat of Thanos. But that's not all Thor is up to. He's recruited by Valkyrie (Tessa Thompson) to join the fight of Loki's army. And while Thor has been a warrior since he first took off his gloves at Asgard to fight the Hulk, Valkyrie is only this month into her training. The trailer is light on actual fighting in the first part. But when we get to the latter half of the trailer, the Guardians are in the thick of it. As Thor prepares to fight the hammer-wielding villain, we get a good look at some of the women in the battle. The bravest and the strongest are the ladies.

At first glance, you might think "That looks like a badass," but if you take a closer look, you'll notice that it's not the most durable object. But it will suffice for a battle that will inevitably end with it shattering. Women don't always get to fight alongside guys, but they sure get a lot of respect. There's a world of difference between a big macho man and these ladies. Nothing says "Avengers, unite!" like the Guardians watching Thor beat up some bad guy. pic.twitter.com/RKPb8zj6K5 — MCU News (@MCU_News) August 4, 2017 A group of powerful women can own a room. Kudos
