We must be careful to bear in mind that the law of gravity does not cause a body to fall, but it is powerless to prevent bodies from falling and there is simply nothing in it [in the law of gravity] to make it fall. It is a true statement that the law of gravity does not cause a body to fall; nevertheless, it is also a true statement that a body that falls will fall unless it is arrested by the physical powers of some other body. It is no answer to say that it falls because it is endowed by nature with gravity, for the preservation of life in general is the living thing to which the rest are due. A horse falls to preserve its life, a man falls to preserve his life, and a body falls to preserve a part of its own life, and it is only for the sake of the preservation of the things outside it that the bodies fall. To those who have been brought up on the subject of the universe and the 'immortality of the soul,' such words may sound strange, but they are words of reason. Nor is there anything either contradictory or 'unreasonable' in this idea [that the part of the body falls for the sake of the whole]. Everything falls by reason of something; nothing falls by reason of nothing; and a part of a body falling is falling by reason of the whole body [the whole body is at that time held aloft by the other parts which are still able to support it and the body remains in free fall while the parts are still in fall]. "Now, to know the agent [that is to say, the reason] which holds the whole body in free fall, the motion of the parts must be considered. A man sitting at a table eating or lying on a bed is held

Secretariat's owner Jack Lowe Jack Lowe, the owner of Secretariat and the Preakness Stakes, is a rare breed -- a successful businessman who also understands the sport of thoroughbred horse racing. The Preakness is one of America's most important races, filled with excitement every year. The Pimlico Race Course allows Secretariat to run the Preakness under its rules. Video: Inside the Preakness.In silver halide color photographic light-sensitive material used in professional and consumer use, a color reproduction method using a coupler and a silver halide color photographic light-sensitive material for blue, green and red light-sensitive layer are employed to reproduce a color image from a color image. Then, color images, the most difficult to achieve, that is, color reproductions of a highly saturated blue, a highly saturated green and a highly saturated red are strongly demanded. To satisfy the demands, a coupler for an infrared-absorbing cyan color-forming compound, a silver halide emulsion and a color developing agent have been sought. Further, to satisfy the demands, it is important that spectral sensitivities of silver halide emulsion layers are balanced, and hence, a silver halide emulsion which can suitably be used for a silver halide color photographic light-sensitive material is necessary. In general, silver halide emulsions of blue-sensitive, green-sensitive and red-sensitive layers have different spectral sensitivity. Accordingly, these emulsions are prepared using different chemical agents, and so called photographic emulsions which are related to color reproduction have complicated structures. However, recently, emulsions in which core-shell grains are used as silver halide grains have been developed, as described in JP-A-6-263453, JP-A-7-226240 and EP0382690. 6d1f23a050
